WEEK 13

SOFTS & FINAL PUSH

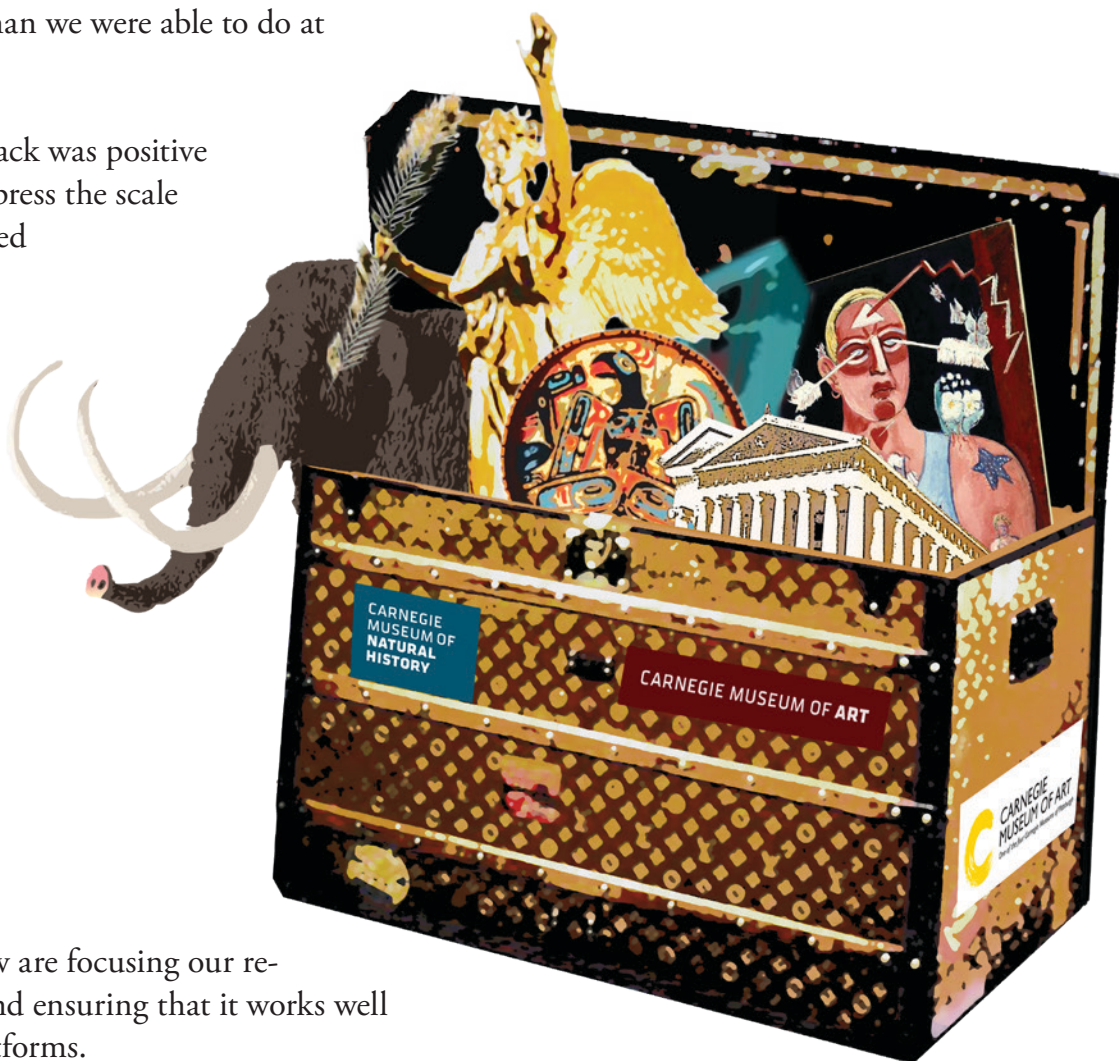

Softs went fairly well, despite a technical glitch that prevented us from presenting the application to faculty as completely as we had hoped. That said, we believe that we were able to demonstrate the project more fully and tangibly than we were able to do at halves.

Much of the feedback was positive in that we were able to express the scale of the problem that we tried to tackle and the faculty was able to then appreciate the many angles we've had to look at in trying to address it. They were also pleased to see that the backend of the system was well polished and robust.

Our next steps now are focusing our resources on the frontend and ensuring that it works well on a variety of mobile platforms.
